

"An erudite and imaginative look at food-related words — useful on the shelf of anyone for whom food resonates." — Margaret Visser, author of The Rituals of Dinner.

Cupboard Love

A Dictionary of Culinary Curiosities
Second Revised Edition

Mark Morton
author of The Lover's Tongue

Food/Reference

"Erudite and entertaining — a delectable feast for all verbivores."

— Hugh Rawson, author of Devious Derivations.

"Mark Morton has cleverly seen that when it comes to etymologies, the names of foods and from cookery have some of the most intriguing origins of all. His scholarship is reliable — not one to accept a folk tale simply because it is original — and he writes always with a light touch (his definition of 'dollop' should be adopted by all dictionaries). Cupboard Love is as much a delight to the mind as food can be to the palate."

— Nigel Rees, author of Cassell's Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins.

"Cupboard Love offers a banquet of food for thought. Mark Morton's delicious 'etymologies' show that everyday we say a mouthful and truly eat our words."

— Richard Lederer, author of Anguished English and The Superior Person's Book of Words.

"Whimsical, side-splitting, erudite and sometimes cheeky....chock full of enough fricatives and fricasees to delight even the hungriest of verbivores" — The Globe and Mail.

Nominated in 1997 for a Julia Child Award, Cupboard Love is back, bigger and better than ever. In this updated and expanded edition, Mark Morton lays out a sumptuous feast of more than a thousand culinary word-histories. From everyday foods to exotic dishes, from the herbs and spices of medieval England to the cooking implements of the modern kitchen, Cupboard Love explores the fascinating stories behind familiar and not-so-familiar gastronomic terms. Who knew that the word pomegranate is related to the word grenade? That baguette is a cousin of bacteria? That soufflé comes from the same root as flatulence? Who knew that vermicelli is Italian for little worms, that avocado comes from an Aztec word meaning testicle, or that catillation denotes the unseemly licking of plates? Lighthearted and thoroughly researched, packed with linguistic lore and cultural trivia, Cupboard Love blends the edible and the etymological into a delectable pièce de résistance.

Mark Morton is the author of The Lover's Tongue: A Merry Romp Through the Language of Love and Sex (Insomniac Press, 2003), which won the Alexander Kennedy Isbister Award for Non-Fiction. He is an assistant professor of English at the University of Winnipeg and language columnist for CBC radio's Definitely Not the Opera. Morton lives in Winnipeg with his wife, author Melanie Cameron.

Canada $21.95 • U.S.A. $16.95 • U.K. £9.99

Cover design by Marijke Friesen

Cover Art: Jan Davidsz de Heem (Dutch, 1606-1683/4), Plums, Peaches, a Cut Melon, Mulberries, Cherries, an Open Walnut, Two Oysters and Some Oyster Shells on a Stone Table, © Christie's Images/CORBIS

ISBN 1-894663-66-7

